Innovation overcomes internal challenges

THE CHALLENGE

Specialising in commercial law, a high profile city firm experienced difficulties in ensuring regulatory training requirements for a number of their employees were being met.

Having previously secured places on an alternative provider's training solution, the firm subsequently found that its employees struggled to meet the demanding needs of that provider's 2 week long programme – causing significant disruption to internal schedules.

The Learning & Development Manager at the firm was tasked with finding a new training provider that could work with them to design an alternative programme which would satisfy regulatory requirements in a more efficient way, thus cutting down on time out of the office.

Kaplan Altior, with its unique approach to bespoke course design, was able to satisfy the firm's training need.

OUR SOLUTION

Through expert understanding of the regulatory requirements that the training had to meet and also by working closely with the firm to establish their particular objectives for the course.

Kaplan Altior designed a new and innovative version of the training programme that could be delivered in a more manageable timeframe for these busy delegates.

The course received excellent feedback from participants and has now been running successfully for a number of years both as an in-house programme and as part of the Kaplan Altior public programme.

END RESULT

The original firm, as well as many others, now benefit from a unique, cost effective and efficient programme which addresses difficulties specific to certain delegates and firms.

The client was delighted with the outcomes from the course and has added it as a re-occurring feature in their training calendar
